

Please, please, please do not allow the current standards for broadcast TV degrade further! Not only do they need to not degrade any further, they need to be strengthened - less skin, less profanity, less sexual innuendo. Society is reeling from men who are dissatisfied with their spouses because they see scantily clad models and actresses on TV just about any time of the day - shows, news, commercials. Young girls are pressured by young boys into having sex before they are ready because of all of the perceived sex going on on prime-time TV. Young men believe they are abnormal if they are not having sex (like on TV). If you won't reach out and save morality from the quicksand, at least don't shove it down faster or otherwise deter its attempts to survive and recover.
