

As a young woman, I do not agree with the lowering of broadcast decency standards. Knowing the media and its constant degradation of women, the lowering of these standards will only serve to provide the public with more female nudity. This will serve as a stepping stone to further perverse female objectification. I am tired of the "sex sells" trope that the media glorifies and will not have my government blindly allow them to continue this. More children will be exposed to this nudity and this is wholly unnecessary given the battles parents ALREADY have to fight to keep pornographic images on the internet away from their children.
