

I am appalled to learn that the FCC is attempting to allow nudity and profanity to be aired on TV during the regular evening hours of programming. Is it really necessary to use nudity and profanity to entice viewers to watch TV shows? If that is the case, maybe the FCC should look for shows that are of a higher quality. Do you know that parents sometimes allow children to watch TV during this time frame? Some families have favorite shows that they watch together. The profanity and adult issues, even in kid shows is more than enough. How is the FCC going to protect the eyes and ears of the little ones during that time if more profanity and nudity are allowed? It will do nothing but harm to America's children. I predict that TV viewing is going to go way down if the FCC approves more profanity and nudity to be heard/shown on TV. I hope you will make the right decision for families and not approve of profanity and nudity on the air at all.
