

Lowering the morality standards on television, or anywhere in the media, for that matter, is highly detrimental to the quality of our society and the appropriate development of our children. Although comments like these are often hailed as old-fashioned, conservative or religious, that is actually irrelevant. Money is the only issue. Degrading and base material and language is not quality entertainment--it is a money-making thrill that my family and I will not support. And we will do everything in our power to ensure that everyone we know does not financially support this base maneuver.