Re: Notice of Permitted Ex Parte Presentation - Wireless E911 Location Accuracy Requirements, PS Docket No. 07-114

Dear Ms. Dortch:

On June 25, 2013, James Arden Barnett, Jr. and Frederick M. Joyce of the law firm Venable LLP, attorneys representing TruePosition, Inc., a member of the Find Me 911 Coalition, and Stuart Salen, Senior Vice President and General Counsel at TruePosition, Inc. and Robert Anderson, Chief Technology Officer at True Position, Inc. met with:

Mr. David Turetsky, Bureau Chief, Public Safety and Homeland Security Bureau
Mr. David Furth, Deputy Bureau Chief, Public Safety and Homeland Security Bureau
Ms. Nicole McGinnis, Deputy Chief, Public Safety and Homeland Security Bureau
Mr. David Siehl, Senior Attorney, Public Safety and Homeland Security Bureau
Ms. Dana Zelman, Attorney Advisor, Public Safety and Homeland Security Bureau

The meeting was convened to discuss the Communications Security, Reliability and Interoperability Council (CSRIC) indoor location accuracy test bed results. Meeting attendees also discussed the subsequent testing done by TruePosition, Inc. with the same independent third party using the CSRIC methodology.

Meeting attendees discussed the technical and logistical aspects of establishing indoor location accuracy rules, including implementation, testing concepts, cost issues, pathways forward to Z-axis information and how to incorporate smart building and other indoor location information in the future.

The meeting attendees were also provided with the attached documents providing further information on the Find Me 911 Coalition and its members. The documents also contain a sampling of comments from members of the coalition regarding the critical importance of 9-1-1 location accuracy to public safety and the ability of first responders to save lives.
