Comment: The current FCC exposure standards for human (animal & plant) exposure to pulsed radio frequency radiation was based on fraudulent science that omitted an enormous body of science, much from the u.s. military and the russians, that confirmed many biological effects from exposures thousands of times lower than current standards. the current standards were voted in by military and industry shills who were hand picked for their position and as usual in this country, human life was given the back seat to industry profits. we are now engaged in a human experiment that conflicts with the nuremberg accords that forbid human experimentation. when the bodies start piling up and our now 13 year olds get brain tumors in 5-10 years who will answer for this and who will care. our government has us in their sights and we are now the enemy. current standards should be drastically lowered at least to the russian standards that are 100x's less than ours.
