

I am writing today to express my concern for the petition for class waiver of the commissions rules for advanced communication services equipment. People with disabilities are People. It is not only the largest minority group in the country, but it is a minority that any one of us could join at any time. If you were to develop an eye condition and start to loose your vision, wouldn't you want to continue using the latest technology to get information? Tablets are an education device, a communication device and one of the easiest ways for adults to stay up to date on current events in the world.

Please do not grant this waiver in favor of the large corporations who would rather not invest in making their technology accessible. It is time to invest in accessibility for the American citizens who happen to have a disability. People with disabilities are a valuable part of our rich and diverse American landscape.

Thank you,
