

Due to the immense proliferation of EMF related things -- cell towers, cell tower-like gadgets on roofs and telephone wires, cell phones, energy meters, wi-fi throughout cities, homes, power plants, hospitals, educational facilities and businesses including airports and planes, the exposure to EMFs bombards every citizen. It is known that various EMF levels effect neurological conditions and cancer. A small population is already hypersensitive and has to control where they can live and be near. There seems to be no overview by government of the total amounts affecting humans, at any age and in any condition -- infants, youth, pregnant women, the infirmed and aging, "healthy" adults at any age. The FCC should initiate studies and rule makings on safety for various populations and for various places; e.g., public parks and schools, etc..
