

I think that for many individuals there are health risks associated with being exposed to radio frequency radiation. For this reason I believe the FCC should be more restrictive when considering where to allow cell phone towers to be built. They should not be allowed near schools, hospitals, and residential areas.