

RE: Comments on ET Docket No. 13-84

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency understands that the intent and specifics of the Federal Communications Commission's Notice of Inquiry are to determine if sufficient new information has emerged since 1996 to warrant changing the FCC's exposure limits for radiofrequency (RF) electromagnetic fields. EPA appreciates the Commission's interest in continuing to work closely with and relying heavily on the guidance of other federal agencies with expertise in public health.

Jerome S. Puskin
Director, Center for Science & Technology
Radiation Protection Division
U.S. EPA