

If you really want to help consumers from being ripped off by the phone, Internet and Television companies you should pass a rule or have Congress pass a law that states that customers must be informed of any price increase at least two billing periods before it takes effect. Then the customer has time to decide to drop or keep the service. This is what I call really protecting the consumer.