

The consequences of progress can be limited if we did things in moderation. We can have a cell phone but mostly use a land line. The American public will not conform to this unless it becomes a financial burden to them-- as they do not believe the long term affects and that there are people who cannot physically cope with all the radiation in our society today. Moderation is appropriate in regulating radiation. It is worth the inconvenience.