

I am strongly in favor of the FCC considering the non-thermal health impacts of electromagnetic radiation when developing and revising standards. In particular, the FCC should consider the impact on pregnant women, infants, and small childrens since these groups are more likely to be affected by health effects of electromagnetic radiation.