

John Miller

Charleston, West Virginia 25305

As Executive Director of the Office of Instructional Technology for the West Virginia Department of Education, I know that seamlessly infusing digital learning throughout the curriculum is an essential component in preparing students for college and careers. Access to high-speed broadband is the key to transitioning to digital teaching and learning practices in all schools throughout America. For that reason, I believe it is imperative that funding be increased for the E-Rate program. Raise the cap!