

7520961250.txt

The current rules are outdated to the point of hindering the ability of amateurs to innovate with digital modes. I fully support SSB and CW communications and don't want to see them disappear but we need digital modes to have higher speeds than can be supported by the current rules. This is very important for emergency communications and passing of more complicated forms in support of the ICS system. I strongly support the ARRL efforts to implement these changes.