

Commercial flights are difficult enough as it is. With TSA restrictions, flight delays, baggage and food surcharges, and a general degradation of passenger comfort going away, adding the horrible idea of having to listen to people speaking on cell phones during flight is unbearable.

E-mails? No problem. Texting? No problem. But voice calls? PLEASE NO.

If in-flight voice calls are permitted, flying will become unbearable. Give commercial passengers some access to texting and/or e-mailing but NEVER allow voice calls (please).

Thank you for listening.
