

2609 Milton Ave.
Kissimmee, FL. 34741
January 6, 2014

Federal Communications Commission

Re: 13-301 Expanding Access to Mobile Wireless Services Onboard Aircraft

To Whom It May Concern,

I would like to take the opportunity to comment on the use of cellular telephones during flights. While this capability would be convenient to many travelers, I believe the annoyances of this type of activity on a plane would be a hindrance to most that travel. When you think about your temporary loss of the capability to hear due to changes in pressure and noise for the aircraft would make it harder for the caller to hear when they are on the phone. When people cannot hear well on the call they tend to talk louder and for some talking louder is just part of what they do. This additional noise would be a significant hindrance to those that are just trying to enjoy the flight or rest in peace.

I would respectfully request that you continue to keep the cell phone ban on all flights.

Respectfully,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Michael Sylvestre". The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style.

Michael Sylvestre