Dear Miss Clyburn:

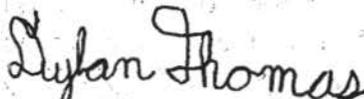

I hope you will be able to assist with an issue I have noticed while watching television. In recent years, I have noticed an increasing number of inappropriate television shows and show segments. Therefore, I would like you to consider filtering the foul language used on television shows and commercials. The provocativeness should be filtered, too. My name is Dylan Cole Thomas. I am eleven years of age and live in Houston, Texas. I am currently a fifth-grader attending Fort Bend Christian Academy. Although I am young, it is evident that the cursing and provocativeness are both negatively influencing my generation.

Television shows and commercials, which should be able to be viewed by all ages are starting to have cursing and provocative behavior. Specifically, The Voice is an example of this type of behavior. It is a reality show that judges singers' talent. It is a family friendly show. It is disturbing to listen to the curse words used by judges. In addition, Herbal Essence is a simple hair product, but its commercials are extremely provocative. Subsequently, now I see my friends saying and doing what they see on television.

I am missing out on watching T.V. and movies because of their adult content. For example, I am not allowed to watch the movie Two Guns because of its provocativeness. Similarly, I was also not able to see G. I. Joe because it had foul language. Moreover, I can not watch The Middle because of its one key curse word in every episode.

Please consider the request to censor the bad language and provocative behavior on television. If you can help, please call me at 281-431-9902. My e-mail address is dcoletomas@hotmail.com. Thank you for your consideration of this request.

Sincerely,

Dylan Thomas
