Mr. Tom Wheeler, Chairman
Federal Communications Commission

Dear Mr. Wheeler,

I read with horror last week that the FCC is thinking about allowing passengers to use cell phones on airplanes that are in the air.

As a flier who has logged over 1 million miles on UAL alone, and a frequent flier, I can't express how strongly I oppose this policy change.

Currently passengers can use their phones before they take off and after they land. This provides ample time to let family members or business associates know that a passenger will be taking off shortly, or has arrived at his or her destination.

Having loud cell phone talkers sitting next to, or behind fellow passengers who are trying to relax or getting something accomplished, would be horrible, and in my opinion could lead to disagreements, confrontations, or worse at 35,000 feet.

I can't emphasize enough how vehemently opposed I and just about everyone I have talked to is about this potential policy change in cell phone usage.

Thank you for your consideration,

Sincerely,

Richard F. Karger

Dear Mr. Wheeler,

Please reconsider your proposal to allow cell phones on flights. Flights are the last haven for travelers who want to relax, sleep, read, etc. There are many dumb ideas and then there is this. Please do the right thing for the majority of passengers who want peace and not some guy talking non-stop from LAX to Washington sitting next to them.

Sincerely,

Mary Stetson
