Re: WC Docket No. 13-306

Dear Ms. Dortch:

Please find attached comments from over 7,500 individuals urging the Federal Communications Commission to declare that under Section 222 of the Communications Act, phone companies may not share customers' call records with third parties, even after removing customers' names.

Respectfully submitted,

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Sandy Oglesby, Phoenix, AZ

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

There is too much stolen identity and too many unwanted phone calls, and I don't want the phone company giving my private information away to whomever asks or pays them. Please, you are supposed to be regulating these companies, so please protect the public.

Patricia Grames, Tucson, AZ

My phone records are private. I do not consent to ANY phone company or other entity sharing any of my records with any third party, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect our privacy by telling phone companies not to sell records to third parties, including government agencies. This is one reason I found a local phone company and finally broke free from evil ATT.

Phoebe Sorgen, Berkeley, CA

My phone records are private. I DO NOT consent to any phone company sharing those records with third parties, even if they do remove my name. I demand the FCC protect my privacy rights by telling telephone companies they cannot sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Roxann Daily, Berkeley, CA

James Shaltes, Carmichael, CA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies, I belong to Mental Health Department, and LGBTQ group, for once in my whole lifetime I would like to at least keep my privacy confidential, security, safety, respect, during my youth I didn't or was not able to share a lot of these qualitys, now I hope I can keep my dignity by resting a sure I feel free to expess without having someone else at the other end, I stand strong to fight for my stated legal rights, therefore I wish you can see the same, think about friends, family, that we will put at stake.

Allen Enriquez, Fresno, CA

I urgently demand that the FCC protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies."

Carlos Echevarria, Inglewood, CA

Daniel Krimm, Menlo Park, CA

To Whom it May Concern;

It is time for the FCC to protect the public not the corporations. We need stronger and quicker rule making to protect what little privacy technology consumers have.

Also, we need to keep the internet free from caps and other gates imposed by ISPs for their own profit or benefit. The internet needs to be open and unbiased. Current trends in capping data are troubling and need to be addressed as soon as possible. Further delays will only encourage an entrenched corporate interest and hurt the public and the ideals of an open internet.

John Sergneri, Petaluma, CA

Richard Dimatteo, San Diego, CA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the

FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Lastly, where are we, America or the former USSR? East Germany or Hungary, Romania, Czechoslovakia of the Soviet block. Where are you taking us?

Michael Kemper, San Francisco, CA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

My phone records, Internet activity, ALL stored data and files (private papers), ARE PERSONAL AND PRIVATE! No one, including any government agency or entity, should have access to this information WITHOUT TRUTHFULLY STATED GOOD CAUSE **AND** A LEGITIMATE AND INDEPENDENT COURT ORDER!

OUR CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS **MUST** BE PROTECTED ABOVE ALL ELSE!

Kit Joel, Santa Barbara, CA

What about the guarantee to the right of privacy? When crucially essential utilities, like my telephone, are transgressed by private enterprise, my privacy is compromised, and my autonomy and state of peace are undermined. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Robert Broska, Vista, CA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

I'm tired of AT&T tell me what they are going to do and never asking how their customers feel and what our preferences are. They only see us as cash cows and they aren't done trying to get as much milk from us as they can.

Linda Gonse, Wildomar, CA

Sue Dean, Longmont, CO

My phone records are private. My "reasonable expectation" is that they're not shared with anybody, including the US Government. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

David S. Isenberg, Cos Cob, CT

This behavior is unacceptable.

Andres Santamaria, Coconut Creek,
FL

like AT&T who are bent on cashing in on violations of our freedom and privacy. Someone has to do the right thing, since companies like AT&T are obviously incapable of doing so themselves. Please put a stop to these heinous violations of American freedom before they become normalized and irreversible.

Justin Memmott, Orlando, FL

Mary Eliades, Evanston, IL

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

This former democracy is rapidly morphing into a fascist police state, and this prurient invasion of privacy for hire must be reversed.

Charles Louis Rapport, Holliston, MA

My phone records are private and must remain private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Dr. Jacob R. Raitt, Laurel, MD

CORRUPT BUSINESSES IN ANY FORMS OR MEDIA INCLUDING THE INTERNET, IT MUST BE CONSIDERED TREASON AND A HANGING OFFENSE.

John D Lynch, LaVale, MD

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company's sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Jessica D. Litman, Ann Arbor, MI

My phone records should be private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies NOT to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Peggy Malnati, Farmington Hills, MI

My phone records are strictly private and confidential.
I do NOT consent to my telephone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name.
I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling telephone companies NOT to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Richard Johnson, Coon Rapids, MN

Blake Buthd, Jefferson City, MO

In addition, it's none of AT&T's beeswax of who I call or what I say on the phone!!
I don't need AT&T pandering to the CIA, the NSA, or some other bureaucratic fuddy-duddy agency,
'cause those government big-shots are full of BS!!

Billy Angus, Hamilton, MT

Charles Trebes, Forest City, NC

Phone companies only compete for my first order, after that they are monopolies. I cannot use one phone company for one call and then chose another for the next call. As a result they must be subject to regulation or they will use their monopoly position to force their customers to accept unfair and even illegal terms of service. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Robert Young, Raleigh, NC

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

The phone companies should tell the NSA to come back with a warrant.

William Dudley, Jackson, NJ

Maria Fernandes, Linden, NJ

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

I disapprove of general warrants even more. How can this have been considered reasonable conduct?

Paul MacLean Anderson, Princeton, NJ

Lisa Roberts, Albuquerque, NM

William Davis, Bearsville, NY

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. Especially since ""anonymizing"" techniques are, in many cases, reversible. So it's not so anonymous. Further, metadata can tell you a lot about a person, even without the content of the call.

I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Jonathan Baker, Brooklyn, NY

My phone records are private and should remain so. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Stephen Jerome Mazurek, Lewiston, NY

My phone records are private. I do not give consent to my phone company sharing my records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Who gives the phone company a right to invade my privacy? I have a constitutional right to privacy!!

Doreen Leary, Mount Vernon, NY

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

The Fourth Amendment should cover this. Just because our paper/effects are now electronic doesn't change the fact that we expect the same degree of privacy, (or as close to it as humanly/technologically possible).

Daniel Garlinger, Newark, OH

Privacy is a right that anyone not suspected of a crime should enjoy, while profit is not a right. Simply removing the name from phone records sold to third parties does not actually anonymize them nor make it any less of a violation of rights for the sake of fattening the pocketbooks of the rich. Under no circumstances should the FCC allow phone companies to sell their customers' records, especially to government agencies. Even an "opt-out" option is insufficient protection, given that opt-outs are often well-hidden and inconsistently applied.

Nicole Johnson, Hillsboro, OR

AT&T is a bad actor in the telecom business. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Eric Dykes, Houston, TX

Lori Kelly, Alexandria, VA

It's my business, dammit, and no one else's."

John McPeek, Fairfax, VA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties,

In today's world people are being constantly having their private world exposed to the commercialism of corporate technology. When we walk ion a store , use our computer or make a phone call. Corporations are gathering information about us. We.,the public have no idea what or how this information is used. Often time our data is being offered/sold to other business . Which we have no knowledge of. The Public part of PUBLIC BROADCAST is being rapidly transformed PUBLIC to CORPORATE BROADCASTING and thus another part of "" We the People"" is lost.
My To Cents

Dennis Lane, Executive Director
Whatcom Television andCommunications"

Dennis A. Lane, Bellingham, WA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.
I am really very angry that they think this is OK to do. It is NOT!

Barb S., Woodinville, WA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.
ALL the monies bandied about are tax payor dollars. We pay ALL of it. From your job to the security apparatus, we pay it all. How dare the government pay with our taxes to steal my constitutionally protected information to vendors also tasked with protecting it..and then rubber stamp it through an agency we also pay for?
This is fraud. This is unconstitutional and this will go to the Supreme Court..who we also pay for.

IT IS MY BELIEF THIS IS NOT SECURITY! I BELIEVE THESE PRIVATE CONTRACTORS HAVE BEEN LOOTING THE TREASURY WITH NO REAL ACCOUNTABILITY. NOW, RETROACTIVELY, THEY ARE ASKING YOU TO DO WHAT OUR LEGISLATURES ARE TOO SCARED AND HOPEFULLY ASHAMED TO DO TWICE, GIVE THEM IMMUNITY FROM PROSECUTION AND PERMISSION TO STEAL. PLEASE...DO NOT DO IT.

Nancy Currah, Casper, WY

I am outraged that I should even have to lobby for my privacy!! The FCC should already be protecting Americans from such corporate abuses like this!! My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Jim Laybourn, Jackson, WY

My phone records are private and I want them to be kept private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. I want privacy with my phone and do not feel sharing or selling my information maintains my privacy.

Terry Carlson, AE

Our phone records are private and we do not consent to our phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing our names. We strongly urge the FCC to protect our privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Why should corporations be able to obtain our information without our written permission?

Roger And Denice Clyne, AK

Hey!- this isn't the USSR, yet --My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies NOT! to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Fil Pierce, Anchorage, AK

Christine Golliver, Hoover, AL

I recognize that this commenting period is merely an exercise in futility. Your Corporate Pimps and their prostitutes throughout the government have no wish to hear what The People have to say. But what the hell? My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Now, ignore this and every other call for the FCC to represent The People and instead, get on your knees under the desks of your Corporate Pimps. We expect no less.

Thomas Hodges, Opelika, AL

Chatham H. Forbes Sr., Los Gatos, AP

not hesitate to take legal action against any phone company if they have done anything illegal.

Alan Craig, AZ

Nat Houghton, AZ

My phone records are private and the United States Constitution guarantees that privacy. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Andrew Jacobsen, Apache Junction,
AZ

Lumarion Conklin, Flagstaff, AZ

Ronald Lansing, Surprise, AZ

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the

FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. There should not even be a question about whether this is illegal or not. It is clearly an invasion of privacy and IS illegal!

Sandra Knight, Tempe, AZ

Jeff Cole, Tucson, AZ

My husband and my phone records are private. WE do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing our names. We urge the FCC to protect our privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. PLEASE TAKE THE RIGHT, FAIR, AND JUST ACTION AS URGED ABOVE.

Mary Ann And Frank Graffagnino,
Tucson, AZ

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. I get too many unwanted calls because of phone companies selling my information. It is even worse to think of the NSA having all my records and they use private contractors without security clearance who also have access. I think this is unconstitutional.

Patricia Grames, Tucson, AZ

Allen Lam, CA

April Corday, CA

Bruce Coston, CA

To be secure in your person, place, and things: I forget which Amendment to the Constitution states this, but obviously the phone companies do not respect the Constitution, it's Amendments or the Rights and privacy of their customers. Personal information is just that, personal. We need laws that make it a felony for any individual or Company or any entity whatsoever to sell any sort of personal information ever. This information is not theirs to sell, and this practice should have been made a felonious activity from the start. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Charles Malinowski, CA

Unless a law-enforcement agency has a warrant, my phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to tell phone companies not to violate the Fourth Amendment and sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Chris Finnie, CA

Clelia Corona, CA

Colin Gould, CA

THIS NEEDS TO STOP! Our Constitution is under attack. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

G Pivrotto, CA

My phone records are private and I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by ordering phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Jeffrey Mumford, CA

customers' records to third parties, and especially not to government agencies.

Mary Hicklin, CA

If this kind of Orwellian surveillance (by either government or private entities) is accepted in the United States of America then the American Experiment has failed; arguably the greatest tragedy in human history. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Peter Childs, CA

Robert Merrill, CA

Ron Jeske, CA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company's sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC, however useless that is, to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Then enforce it. Despite what "our" federal government appears to think, we, the people, are individuals with rights, not just resources to be exploited or criminals for dissenting from excessive surveillance.

Susan Hathaway, CA

William Crane, CA

Go after traitors, not law-abiding citizens. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Coralie Carraway, Auburn, CA

I want the FCC to protect my privacy and the privacy of others. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Carol Hirth, Berkeley, CA

Marlene Lieberman, Berkeley, CA

Ron Weinberg, Burbank, CA

To whom it May Concern, My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Thank you, Petria Seymour

Petria Seymour, Ca 90293, CA

My phone records are supposed to be private. Except they are exploited,my internet use is also exploited.street light cams also cause much more targeting because I expect the City to follow Civil Rights laws,but they refuse to do so.Police are too aggressive towards persons who are at a disadvantage.I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Ivin Mood, Costa Mesa, CA

Regardless of new technology and the ability to easily track my phone activity, when I use my phone my expectation is that my information is private unless proper permission through a warrant is obtained. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Josephine Polifroni, Danville, CA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with anyone even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy: order phone companies not to sell their customers' records to anyone whether third parties or government agencies.

Kevin Kingma, El Cerrito, CA

Opening phone records to outsiders is a bad idea for everyone. Selling records of phone behavior demeans phone users and ultimately risks motivating users to abandon phone technology for more private one. Please protect the public interest. Forbid the sale of customers' records to third parties.

Will Leben, Emeryville, CA

Bruce Cahill, Escondido, CA

Please be advised that my phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

John Reed, Fairfax, CA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. I am totally sick of being spied on by my own country!!!! This is beyond shameful.

It makes me sorry I even voted for President O'bama. I've lost All faith in my government.

Sharon Larson, Fairfield, CA

Charlotte Pirch, Fountain Valley, CA

Our phone records are private. We do not consent to our phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing our name. We urge the FCC to protect our privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Jack And Margarita Denman,
Fullerton, CA

I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. FCC, this is your job. Protect us.

Pamela Osgood, Grass Valley, CA

Let us all respect our Constitution! My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Shannon Tolson, Kelseyville, CA

My phone records are no one's business but mine!! I do NOT consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Patricia Bryant, Los Angeles, CA

Fred & Sara Krauthamer, Monterey
Park, CA

Patricia Morgan, Novato, CA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Just because our president has given the go ahead for spying on all Americans doesn't mean you can freely do whatever you want with our private information.

Augustine Sanchez, Oakland, CA

Robert Keveess, Oakland, CA

William Whitlock, Oxnard, CA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Jonathan Kaplan, Portola Valley, CA

I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Third party businesses should never be allowed to purchase such information. And if a government agency has probable cause to suspect me or another citizen of illegal activity, they should be required to go through the legal procedure to get a wiretap order. Law enforcement agents have to obtain a search warrant to enter my premises. They should have to use a similar procedure to collect info on my telephone and/or text activities.

Deborah Reed, Rich Cucamonga, CA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the

Rev. Annette Saint John Lawrence,
Sherman Oaks, CA

I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Conrad Melton, Sun City, CA

Maria D Fernandez, West Hollywood,
CA

IS THERE ANY DOUBT AT ALL THAT PERSONAL PRIVACY IS ALREADY BEING COMPROMISED AND INVADED... TOTALLY WITHOUT ANY ETHICAL, REASONABLE, LEGITIMATE, OR JUSTIFIABLE PURPOSE OR CAUSE IN THIS COUNTRY? I TOTALLY REJECT... AND ABHOR... ANY SUCH INVASION OF MY PERSONAL PRIVACY AND/OR CONFIDENTIALITY BY ANY PHONE COMPANY... UNLESS AND UNTIL some officially-appointed judge of a legally-authorized court were to order that privacy INTRUDED UPON... FOR SOME VERIFIABLE AND VALID REASON, BACKED UP BY LEGALITY, FACTS, AND PROOF! Being that there is no grounds to deem this being so, and SUPPOSEDLY I'M PROTECTED BY LAWS AGAINST SUCH AN EGREGIOUS AND ILLEGAL INTRUSION IN THE FIRST PLACE, THERE IS NO REASON OR CAUSE AT ALL THAT PHONE COMPANIES SHOULD BE PERMITTED TO EAVESDROP ON MY PRIVACY, MUCH LESS SELL THE CONTENTS OF THAT INVASION, TO ANYONE... PERIOD! I will not consent to my phone company sharing my phone records with any third parties, even after removing my name. I DEMAND THE FCC IMMEDIATELY ACT BY PROHIBITING ALL PHONE COMPANIES FROM HENCEFORTH INVADING MY PERSONAL PRIVACY OR SELLING ANY SUCH PRIVATE, PERSONAL INFORMATION TO ANYONE, ANY PHONE COMPANIES, OR ANY THIRD PARTIES, including government agencies.

Steve Marvin, West Sacramento, CA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I have signed up for the National NO-Call and Colorado NO-Call since 2001, and STILL my information and contact are floating out there for rent, so someone can make it their capital again and again, without my permission. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by ensuring that phone companies cannot sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies or debt collection agencies.

Monica Koziol, CO

My phone records are private! I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. CIVIL LIBERTIES MATTER.

Natali Hunter, Colorado Springs, CO

Richard Baker, Colorado Sprins, CO

Alex Lukens, Cortez, CO

Jolynn Jarboe, Denver, CO

Please do not wait any longer to do this. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company (AT&T) sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Enid Brodsky, Durango, CO

William Handley, Edgewater, CO

Stop violating Americans' 4th Amendment rights. Those that do so should be prosecuted and imprisoned like any other criminal. My phone records are private, and I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Thomas Reeck, Lafayette, CO

customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Is nothing for sale anymore?

Eric Hartman, Lakewood, CO

David Burns, Louisville, CO

Joyce Goglio, Louisville, CO

Charlotte Stubbs, Whitewater, CO

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my or any other phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. This is just wrong. Too much of our personal information is floating out there as it is and I'm tired of it. Start doing your job.

Gael Stubbs, Whitewater, CO

Sharon McClure, CT

I want my phone records to be private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I request that the FCC protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties. Any government agency with a legitimate need for such records should obtain them by due process in accord with the Constitution.

Dana Sawyer, Colchester, CT

Spying on Americans without constitutional authority is anathema to democracy. Remember even Ashcroft, no admirer of civil liberties, objected from his sickbed in 2004. Such spying sets up the apparatus for dictators. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Susie Humphreys, Washington, DC

My phone records and those of EVERY OTHER private citizen are, and should be, private. I do NOT consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. That is an outrageous violation of privacy. I urge the FCC to STEP UP to protect my privacy by telling all phone companies NOT TO SELL THEIR CUSTOMER'S RECORDS to third parties, including to government agencies. My business is NOT their business. I am an adult perfectly capable of taking care of myself and my family and do not want to be monitored by the phone companies OR by the government or any of its agencies. Please help put a stop to this underhanded, unnerving, unnecessary invasion of the lives of private citizens of the United States of America. It is still America, isn't it? With practices such as this going on, sometimes it's hard to tell. Stand up for America and for her good and loyal citizens who want and -- unless they prove otherwise -- deserve respect, which includes the privacy due them. You can do it. YOU can do it. You CAN do it. YOU CAN DO IT! The question is, WILL YOU? If not, why not? If so, much appreciation and thank you!

Katherine Ward, DE

Elizabeth Gates Sanders, FL

This is important to me! My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Neil Mingledorff, FL

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect our privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. As is probably obvious, we are at their mercy. No one can live in this country these days without multiple, wired or wireless connectivity. We must be assured that as we pursue our daily activities--necessary ones--we are not putting our lives and pocketbooks at risk.

Virginia Demers, FL

My phone records are private. The Government might be allowed some access under certain conditions, BUT I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties otherwise, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties.

Vaughn Barnett, Altamonte Springs,
FL

My phone records are private. I absolutely do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I strongly urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Joan Walker, Bell, FL

Laura Berben, Cape Coral, FL

Our phone records are private. We do not consent to our phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing our names. We urge the FCC to protect our privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.
Cynthia & John Clements

Cynthia Clements, Gainesville, FL

I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. My phone records are private. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Brian Rice, Indialantic, FL

My phone records are private. I pay the phone company NOT TO list my phone number and all our phones are listed in the federal government's do not call list. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Frank Mazuca, Lakeland, FL

Jordan Braswell, Miami, FL

This is a GROSS violation of my privacy! My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Dominique Varnedoe, Naples, FL

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. They make enough money already. That they do this so willingly is deplorable.

Karen Campbell, Naples, FL

My personal identity, information and activities are all part of my intellectual property. Anytime my voice, my writing or my actions are recorded, it becomes such according to copyright law. So how can a 3rd party usurp my right to intellectual property without my express permission to do so? They can not!

James Stone, Santa Rosa Beach, FL

Andrew Foertsch, St. Petersburg, FL

If the phone companies want to share records and information about my account, they need to get my permission first. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Richard Hammock, Tallahassee, FL

Amy Stanberry, Winter Springs, FL

Wireless companies are already raping the public with their rates! And selling my info??? My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Sanford Brown, Covington, GA

Daniel Lowry, Fayetteville, GA

My phone records are PRIVATE. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name, EVER. I DEMAND the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Karl Clarke, Hiawassee, GA

Terry Wright, Suwanee, GA

We supposedly live in the "land of the free." But spying on people without any cause is clearly wrong and counter to the American way of life. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Stephenie Blakemore, HI

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. I am surprised that I have to reassert this basic privacy issue. I find this a sad comment on today's America. Let's start a turn around and return to America, the land of the free and the home of the brave. Thank You

Scott Robeson, Hanalei, HI

It is already scary enough that internet providers are supplying marketers with information on my internet purchases. I don't NOT want the same thing happening from the screening of my phone calls!! My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Virginia Bennett, Honolulu, HI

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. In an age where protecting our privacy from identity thieves is on everyone's mind, it is horrifying to know that our phone companies are literally selling us out. Please put a stop to this violation of our Constitutional rights.

Andria Coutoumanos, Makawao, HI

I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Verse four of "Stop the War, Bring Back the Bill of Rights Now". Sung to the tune "Separation Blues": There are funny little noises on my phone line; Funny little noises on your phone line; Funny little noises on our phone lines--the NSA boys are working overtime.... STOP THE WAR, BRING BACK THE BILL OF RIGHTS NOW

Margaret J Nelson, IL

Fred Smith, N. Riverside, IL

John Gerty, Jr., Skokie, IL

M. Catherine Buntin, Wilmette, IL

My phone records are 'supposed' to be private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with any third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties - especially including any government agencies.

Eldon Wedlock, Indianapolis, IN

The cornerstone of personal freedom is the ability to control ones information. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. Joey Sprague, KS

I do not consent to my phone company sharing my phone records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties. I am willing for my records to be available for court- sanctioned national security measures, but not for routine data pools, public or private.

Paul Enos, Lawrence, KS

Pamela Glaze, Fisherville, KY

Wayne Gains, Florence, KY

Peter Shrock, Hammond, LA

My phone records are private. I make calls in private and I expect them to remain private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. The CIA, FBI and other alphabet agencies are supposed to get warrants for things like wire tapping for good, legal reasons. I refuse to live with my government acting like I am some kind of criminal. No drones, no phone records, no spying on Americans. It is illegal and I refuse to allow it.

Deni Ann Gereighty, Metairie, LA

Johanna Kovitz, Allston, MA

Catherine Bell, Amherst, MA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. This is a foul combination of disregard for our rights, and devotion to profit above all else.

Brenda Troup, Bolton, MA

My phone records are private. I do not agree to let any utility company share them records with 3rd parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to halt utility company sales of customer data to 3rd parties, including government agencies.

Ned Flaherty, Boston, MA

The news that phone companies are selling or giving away information about my calls is appalling. The practice is indefensible. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Betsy Smith, Brewster, MA

Bob Sparling, Cambridge, MA

Why is this even an issue? I should not have to worry about this. Of course sharing my phone records should be illegal. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Fourth Amendment standards that govern postal mail and one's own property. Thank you for your consideration.

David J. Lafond, Holyoke, MA

Martin Silberberg, Pelham, MA

Peter Motyka, Plymouth, MA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I would understand if my phone company complied with a legal warrant, of course, but without a court ordered and supervised warrant, this kind of violation of my privacy is clearly unconstitutional. And violating my privacy for money is not only unconstitutional, it is contemptible. My right to privacy is not for sale. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Peter Haydu, Winchester, MA

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. In America today everything seems to be for sale - politicians and business just chase the almighty buck wherever they can. Government surveillance of private citizens' telephone and internet usage is an utter violation of our basic right of privacy. We have lost many individual protections given in the Bill of Rights under the guise of fighting the good fight for 'anti-terrorism' since September, 2011. It is time for us to stop running scared and move forward protecting our country without demolishing what our country is and stands for. Stop invading my privacy and allowing any business, especially the telephone companies tasked with providing mobile service, from making a profit from selling MY information in any shape or form. The CIA has subverted and trampled on our rights - does the FCC have any right to do so? Prove it to me.

Phyllis Edinberg, Worcester, MA

It's bad enough that I have registered several times on the "Do Not Call" list and still receive annoying telemarketing calls! My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Margery D Knight, Annapolis, MD

Mary Madden, Baltimore, MD

Stuart Fishelman, Baltimore, MD

Joseph Friend, Columbia, MD

My phone records are private. I do not and shall not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. We have lost many freedoms since 9/11/01. It is time to reclaim them. Privacy is an inherent freedom.

Jacob R. Raitt, Laurel, MD

John Lynch, Lavale, MD

Richard Lalumondier, Montgomery Vlg,
MD

customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Government collection of such records absent a warrant constitutes 4th amendment violation. At the very least full disclosure of this data collection and sale should be required on all billing statements of companies that do this.

William Jacobs, Olney, MD

Data mining keeps getting worse and worse, governmental security agencies hand-in-hand with the private sector. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

William Neil, Rockville, MD

We are watching! My phone records are private. I don't consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties. The FCC should protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell customer records to third parties, including government agencies.

Al Mendelsohn, ME

John Whitman, Peaks Island, ME

There is way too much invasion into our privacy already. For example, I dislike being tracked so much that I have stopped frequenting stores that offer "loyalty cards." (Walgreens was my favorite store but I haven't shopped there in a year because I don't want my privacy invaded and I don't want to pay more for goods just because I don't have a "yes card".) My phone records must be kept private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Laurie Kaniarz, MI

Margaret Bennett, Ann Arbor, MI

My phone records are private and my business only. I do NOT consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies THEY CANNOT SELL THEIR CUSTOMERS' RECORDS records to third parties, including federal and local governmental agencies. We worry about federal/military spying on the public but I believe the PROBLEM OF CORPORATE SELLING OF PRIVATE INFORMATION IS EVEN MORE DANGEROUS. So, while we're redefining military spying, let us also eliminate corporate/business for profit interests from such spying, and DO IT YESTERDAY!!!

Wayne Warner, Battle Creek, MI

I do not consent to my phone company sharing my phone records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Alan Thayer, Commerce Twp, MI

numbers and e-mail addresses should be private! My phone ring most days from 9 to 9. I can not sit down in peace or take a nap if I am tired! This is a house not a business!Yes I use caller block but it still rings once and my caller block is full. I am fed up with the whole situation! The amount of e-mail I get from organizations I never heard of is disgusting. On an average day I get 300 plus e-mails and unsubscribe doesn't seem to work. I do not want to spend that much time on my computer . Is there any help out there?

Marie Leven, Flushing, MI

Andre' J. Phillips, Jenison, MI

Joanie Vigh, Kentwood, MI

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. Donald Handy, Mt. Clemens, MI

Sherron Collins, Spring Lake, MI

My phone records should be private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Debra Debruin, MN

Phone providers now own my information to sell to bidders at their whim? CIA notwithstanding. Would you call this sanctioned criminality? Where does it end & are there no bounds to privacy at all anymore? My phone records are private. IS THERE A NEW MEANING TO THIS WORD TODAY? I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties!!!

Ernst Gamauf, MN

"In my own country I am in a far-off land. I am strong yet have no force or power; I win yet remain a loser. At break of day I say goodnight. When I lie down I have a great fear of falling." ~Francois Villon My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

John Masanz, MN

Keep the government out of my telephone calls! My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Julie Woodbury, Phd, MN

Susan Clark Harris, Aitkin, MN

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Thank you for your time and consideration.

My telephone records are private. I do NOT consent to my telephone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling all telephone companies NOT to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Richard Johnson, Coon Rapids, MN

I do not consent to telephone records of my private exercise of free speech, free assembly, and political activity to be sold to the CIA, or to any other corporate or government body, for any purpose whatsoever. My Constitutional rights are not for sale to any corporation or patriotism-enforcing government power. I do not consent to the elimination of my Constitutional protection against unwarranted searches. I do not consent to giving any governmental or business entity the power to monitor and supervise my private communication and protected speech.

Ellen Schousboe, Edina, MN

Where is my right to privacy. Does our constitution mean nothing? I have a presumption that just because I use a phone doesn't mean the phone company owns my conversation. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by making it a crime for phone companies to sell their customers' records. They should belong to ME.

Gregory Labelle, Minneapolis, MN

Do NOT sell my phone records to the CIA, NSA or anyone else. Do NOT give them away. That is private information, protected under the U.S. Constitutions (or what's left of it). Giving it to those government agencies does NOT make anyone safer. Rather, It provides fodder for those who will do evil to anyone who does not fully accept the agendas of the power hungry.

James Fuller, Minneapolis, MN

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Thank you for your time and consideration.

FURTHERMORE: Federal law should be changed to clearly state that these records are the property of the customer, NOT the phone company, or any other business entity!

Guy Bateman, Poplar, MT

Robert Macpherson, Ph.D., Arden, NC

Steve West, Charlotte, NC

I am an civil litigation attorney. My communications with clients or witnesses are private. My communications with health care providers, my own or those of my clients, are private. That means that my phone records, including who I call and how long we talk, are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I demand that the FCC protect my privacy and that of my clients by forbidding phone companies from selling their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies or giving them away without a valid subpoena or a specific warrant.

Vicki Rowan, Charlotte, NC

And what is the CIA doing operating inside the United States, anyway? I thought that was a violation of their charter, or have we done away with the rule of law altogether?

Sharon Harmon, Cramerton, NC

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. What hypocrisy to send men into wars to 'protect our freedoms' only to have our own government take them away from us.

Robert Sirois, Salem, NH

Cell phone records are private and should be protected. Individuals have not consented to allow phone companies to share their phone records with third parties. As such, I urge the FCC to protect the privacy of everyone by preventing phone companies from selling their customer's records to third parties, including government agencies.

Laurie Noyes-Hand, Stratham, NH

I am really horrified about the amount of personal information that companies believe is their's to sell. They make money and our time is wasted responding to junk - or worse. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with any third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Constance Brookes, NJ

The phone is a necessity in this world. My privacy should be protected from the selling of lists by phone companies - either to private companies or the government - just as the telephone is protected from unwarranted wire-taps and the US mail.

Lorraine Niemela, NJ

Citizens' telephone records are private. I do not consent to my telephone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. It is time that the Govt of the United States Govt stops throwing their weight around and do the job they were elected to do. The Constitution clearly states that spying on its citizens and selling our personal information is "unusual search and seizure" They MUST stop this! We are not living in a dictatorial society and our people have guaranteed rights in this Country. What's next" Disappearing families foer speaking up? Putting us in jail under the illegal Patriot Act? CEASE & DESIST NOW!.

Mary Kohns, Las Vegas, NV

Clayton Griffith, Reno, NV

My phone records are and should be private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I implore the FCC to protect my privacy and everyone else's by instructing phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Arlene Balaban, NY

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. I believe it should be totally illegal for phone companies to share any information that I share with those I choose to share when I am on the phone. I think that the phone sharing by phone servers is totally dispicable.

Barbara Thau, NY

I pay you for service. You don't own anything I do. Stop Or I'll sue.

Bob Jewett, NY

Saul Robbins, NY

suddenly required a phone number and a Facebook account! There is no reason for that. I am sick and tired of my privacy being for sale and stolen. Most likely both of my credit card accounts have been compromised by Target! WE NEED MORE PRIVACY AND SECURITY, not LESS!

Susan Tocha, NY

My phone records are private - content AND Metadata! I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with ANY third parties - be they The Surveillance State or Rapacious Corporations - even after removing my name. I demand that the FCC protect my privacy by ordering phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Timothy Liebe, NY

Roy Doremus, Andes,, NY

Bruce Eyster, Brooklyn, NY

Celeste Leibowitz, Brooklyn, NY

I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Thank you for your consideration.

Hope Carr, Brooklyn, NY

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name, and even in bulk. Kathy Martino, Brooklyn, NY

Richard Tarr, Carthage, NY

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. I am tired of government and company snooping

Joseph Iacuzzi, Fulton, NY

I am outraged. Privacy is not up for debate. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Eric Skalwold, Ithaca, NY

Thomas Reyer, Ithaca, NY

Maria Martinez, Johnson City, NY

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. I thought 1984 was required reading--it was a cautionary tale, not a prescription!

Arthur Kaseman, New York, NY

Land of the free isn't unless we again have privacy free from surveillance. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Bill Stockton, New York, NY

Dear FCC Commissioners, My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Failure to protect users from Corporate data brokers et al. is NOT ACCEPTABLE! Corporate lack of accountability & lack of responsibility MUST be re-introduced to help the consumers of our insecure, out-of-date/non-universal broadband phone/internet-web communications services. Non-Universal broadband makes it easier for foreign interests to hack into ALL of our telecom networks & that makes true net neutrality a necessity, because one insecure email message/phone call can create havoc quite easily. Thank you very kindly for your time and attention to this vital privacy, economic well-being & national security matter. Yours truly, Mr. Brett Greisen NYC NY 10025

Brett Greisen, New York, NY

Please let my phone records stay private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

John Catherine, New York, NY

My phone records should be private. I object to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

John Markowitz, New York, NY

Livia Vertova, New York, NY

William Sharfman, New York, NY

For the following 3 reasons, I urge everyone involved to stop sharing any information about my phone records, end of story! 1. My phone records are private. 2. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. 3. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Burton Schwartz, Port Jefferson St,
NY

Susan Fountain, Poughkeepsie, NY

Beverly Simone, West Nyack, NY

Elaine Hardman, Wlsv, NY

Jack Roth, Yonkers, NY

Michael Pomplas, Akron, OH

Cecelia Vidmar, Cleveland Heights,
OH

Barbara Mcconaghy, Dublin, OH

Yoshiko Ikuta, Lakewood, OH

Kevin Cotter, Plain City, OH

Mary Fletcher, Stow, OH

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. I further believe our information belongs to us and NOT to the phone company. If the phone companies want to use our information/data information they must ASK our permission before any use. Also we MUST be compensated for any use our information/data information! Then there ought compensation for tracking cookies, data mining, and the like or it should be stopped. After all this information comes directly off our phones, computers, tablets,laptops, and other electronic devices. Therefore I believe what is going on is unlawful/illegal therefore it needs to be stopped! After all this is or should under the FCC's control and therefore has authority over this information.

Charles Grindle, Toledo, OH

Marge Joefreda, Waynesville, OH

My phone records are boring. I need to talk with friends and family about health, committees, church, etc. Please don't waste your precious time on this private boring grandma. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

John Casey, Corvallis, OR

I am appalled that my privacy is being invaded. I have nothing to hide, but the freedom we cherish in this country is at risk, when the privacy of decent citizens is invaded this way! My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

Marilyn Firth, Corvallis, OR

The surveillance state has got to be stopped, and we will stop it. Citizens should not be money making machines for every corporation and government office that wants to dip in. We are outraged, and we will stop using this technology if appropriate and strict safeguards are not installed. It is simply not worth it. My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

My phone records are private. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. Phone records should be as secure as US mail. Imagine the post office selling information about who you sent letters to, when, and how often. This is outrageous.

Jeff Stookey, Portland, OR

It is wrong for the NSA to collect our phone metadata in bulk. It is wrong for the data to be sold for commercial exploitation. This is a breach of privacy that must be stopped.

Kris Alman, Portland, OR

Phone records are private. I strongly oppose my phone company sharing my records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. The prIvacy issue is getting out of hand. - Ann and Doug Morten.

Ann Morten, Saint Helens, OR

My phone company needs to know the numbers that I call and the numbers that call me so that they can properly bill me. Other than that, this information should be kept private. If the government wants it then they should have to get a warrant. The 4th amendment says in part: "to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects". We give letters to the post office to deliver, but these letters are still PRIVATE. So it should be with phone calls. I do not consent to my phone company sharing those records with third parties, even after removing my name. I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies.

David Morrison, Sixes, OR

I urge the FCC to protect my privacy by telling phone companies not to sell their customers' records to third parties, including government agencies. I can't imagine why in the WORLD you want to listen to my boring phone calls anyway. While you listen to me talk to the vet about my cats' food, you miss the guy plotting world domination. You can't possibly sort through all the crap you're collecting, so for God's sake, be selective and go after the people who might legitimately be threats, not a 68 year old self-published author! You people are nuts.

Karla Von Huben, Vancouver, WA

Donald Kadidlo, Hudson, WI

Please stop this horrible policy. Stop my phone companies from selling my phone records, of anyone's phone records, this should be illegal. It is bad enough the NSA and CIA are listening to my phone conversations, etc. Now they are tracking who I talk to? Do you want your phone calls and messages tracked? Your mates, your children's, etc. This is the USA, it is not The People's Republic of China. I think businesses forget that! We don't, we live in a democracy. Fight for our rights, our privacy. Do the right thing and please stop this practice now!

Milly Doe, Madison, WI
