

Dear Sirs – Your proposed regulation regarding the height & width of cell towers has come to my attention. I am not pleased by yet another Federal mandate usurping State law, even though this one may not have a big dollar sign attached. However, if the Federal Government, through the FCC, must intercede in this matter, there have to be exceptions where there are State and/or local laws to protect wilderness, wild forest and scenic vistas. At the very least, Federal law should not apply to cell towers in State Parks within which there exists a local policy to protect the environment regarding these unsightly menaces.

I live in Massachusetts, but have visited the Adirondacks once or twice a year for over 65 years. Please do not take this action that would detract from the beauty of the land within the “Blue Line” which surrounds the Adirondack State Park. Respectfully submitted --
