Presuming someone must have requested that this option be available (I cannot imagine why unless they are the people who like to speak on their cell phones in very loud voices about their accomplishments), I wholeheartedly ask that the request not be granted. It's bad enough in open public places where it is usually possible to avoid them. It would be absolute torture to be confined on a plane with such obnoxious callers, who are in my experience generally oblivious in the extreme to the possibility that their behavior might be negatively impacting others. Thank you most sincerely for your consideration.
