I support the United Healthcare request that a company not be considered in violation of the TCPA if they call a number for which they have prior consent; even if that number has been reassigned (without their knowledge).

It is important to me that I receive notifications such as prescription renewals or immunization reminders and I do not want them to be sued if I have given my consent but then had my number changed. I think that if a company makes a call to a wrong number they should be able to update their records, and as long as they do not call again, they should not face a fine. Please honor their request.
