

7521076381.txt

Allowing cell phone use on board airplanes is a terrible idea. It not only promises a huge annoyance, but also presents a serious safety issue regarding communication with airline personnel and possible violence among passengers.

Rather than claiming that the FCC is simply making a technical decision regarding interference, why not coordinate between FCC, FAA, and other agencies to design rules that actually benefit people and our transportation system?