Re: Proceeding 14-28 Protecting the Promoting the Open Internet

Dear Mr. Wheeler –

I urge you to reclassify the internet as a telecommunications service. It is not appropriate that control of this vital communication network is becoming increasingly the province of a small number of large corporations. These corporations, notably Verizon, AT&T and Google, are understandably making all possible efforts to profit from the internet. It is your responsibility to assure that public access to information is not controlled by these corporations, but rather remains an integral part of our freedom of speech and an important commons in the national culture.

Thank you for your consideration,

Dan Lorimer
