Thank you for hearing our comments on this matter. One point to bring up in defense against in-flight cell phone usage is the safety factor. I fly at least once a month on business trips. It's extremely hard to hear the pilot or flight attendant talk through their system. Adding more noise to a tin box where reverberation is at it's highest would make it almost difficult to catch what they are saying. I would politely suggest, at best, a study to make sure this isn't an issue.
