Sirs,

Please deny permission for the merger of Comcast and Time Warner. The FCC has allowed the merger of Time and Paramount (1991), AT&T Cable and Comcast (2002), and now you are considering Comcast and Time Warner. During this time, broadband speeds have barely increased to an average of 13 mb/s (my download speed for $200/month), whereas most developed countries enjoy much higher rates at lower costs.

Why?

There is no incentive for the cable companies, the defacto owners of the Internet in the US, to reduce prices and increase speeds.

Hold this merger up for lower total cable prices and faster speeds Internet speeds.

Regards,

Lawrence Fry
