I am against a Comcast and Time Warner merger.

As a Comcast customer, I have observed my bills increase dramatically over the last several years, while the reliability of Comcast's broadband and the selection of cable television channels has suffered.

Comcast and Time Warner each control large areas in which there is little or no competition. I do not expect anything good to happen for consumers if Comcast and Time Warner are allowed to merge into one company, effectively creating a monopoly to which most subscribers would have little choice but to use. I expect the quality of programming and broadband reliability to decline.
