

7521099911.txt

I would like to note my conditional opposition to the merger of Time Warner Cable with Comcast. My opposition is based on the current lack of competition on the cable industry. In most parts of the country there are no serious competitors among cable providers. This is usually due to the monopoly status granted to the existing cable companies years ago. If Comcast were to agree to give up their monopoly status in all areas where they provide service, then I would have no objection to the merger. The problem is too little competition. This merger will only make that problem worse!