

7521100062.txt

I pay Comcast $78 per month to be a pipe. I watch no general audience type of programming and don't have cableTV. If the providers of the podcasts I watch were required to pay for access to get 'on', they would never have existed. The monopoly that Comcast enjoys in the last mile should estoppel them from ANY revenue on the first mile. None. They should have to ship what I pay for regardless of the source. And the reason is that they got that monopoly from government. Now it is up to you to govern. Tell them NO. Tell them to deliver all bits the same. And if they can't do that - then allow access to those who can to their coax. There is no, NO, technical barrier.