

7521100167.txt

The FCC must reclassify broadband as a public utility. A federal court decision earlier this year "told the FCC that if it wishes to ensure Internet users can send and receive information free from ISP interference, then the agency must classify ISPs as telecom carriers under Title II of the Communications Act."

The decision to do so would put the FCC on much stronger legal footing. You must protect the public and safeguard the Internet's future. protect net neutrality and the future integrity of the free and open internet.

---