Not that it will do any good, since you're either bought and paid for like the US Congress and the President, or too chicken to stand up for what's right against the corporations, but here goes. I really hate the idea that flows of information are just another good or service in this fast fading democracy. The internet should be a regulated utility. While cable companies are only local monopolies, the worst is that all across the country they are monopsonies, which is worse for our now lost democracy than even monopoly abuse of customers. Their customers are our citizens; we need as many sources of information as possible to vote in an informed way.
