

7521100907.txt

Protecting net neutrality needs to be your highest aim. Allowing ISPs to allocate bandwidth at their discretion is akin to censorship, in effect allowing private interests to quiet competing voices, a corporate gag order on free speech akin to government censorship in less democratic parts of the world. With the commercial interests of a company at stake, minority interests will be quashed, undoubtedly. For the sake of continuing in an open, democratic society, we need net neutrality.