

7521100913.txt

There is no doubt internet infrastructure has become critical to the daily life of millions of Americans. Much like the telephone before it, many people rely on the internet and the global connectivity it brings. If we are to ensure the continued success of the internet, we should move to classify ISPs as common carriers.