An unfettered and open internet is going to be the hallmark of the progressive and developed world in the near future. Don't make America look foolish by allowing corporate greed to direct the laws covering the internet. Bluntly, if you let ISP companies priorities content based on payment fro those content owners you will stifle creativity and innovation. New and exciting internet start ups will not be able to cough op the money a established giant like "facebook" could, and therefor would not be given a fair chance. It would be like if politici ans only paid attention to the voters who donated tons of campaign money... oh wait.
