SOPA didn't work, and PIPA didn't work in Congress. We had a previous FCC Chairman who was walking the thin line between protecting an 'Open and Free' Internet and protecting the interests of Larger Telecom Organizations. We have now a prior lobbyist for Telecom wanting to rewrite the rules for their bosses. We see how well this has worked over at the Federal Reserve, the SEC, and other agencies that governed our Money. I hope there is someone in Washington, D.C. who cares about commerce enough to realize that we are unable to sustain our economic growth on the backs of so few companies. This 'rules change' is ill advised, and dangerous to commerce, and the growth of new industries on the Internet. Just like the Telecom (Cable, Wireless, et al) desire. Please do not pass these changes.
