You should reclassify broadband internet as a telecommunications (or "Common carrier") service.

Carriers already charge customers for bandwidth. Since the bandwidth is already paid for they have no right to charge businesses for preferential bandwidth speeds to customers. Since the preferential bandwidth will not be created out of thin air it will be at the expense of bandwidth to other sites. If I pay $100 for access to internet why does it matter what sites I visit and why should some be throttled in expense for others? Usually I would vote with my money and move to a different carrier, but due to lack of carriers in my area it means that I don't have a choice but to pay my $100 and let Comcast decide which sites I should visit with preferred speed, even though I have already paid for the top tier of available speeds from Comcast.

The carrier's behavior on this issue is anti-competitive and will hurt the economy, the customer and the internet as a medium for small business. Please reclassify broadband internet as a telecommunications (or "Common carrier") service.
