

7521102892.txt

In a country that espouses the belief that anyone can make it through their entrepreneurship, it is appalling that a rule allowing "pay for speed" that so blatantly favors existing corporations is even under consideration. How is such a rule supporting an equal opportunity for the next Facebook/Amazon/Netflix? Preferential treatment to those who can afford the payola is anti-American. Net neutrality is the only way to continue the technological advances of the past few decades of internet growth.