There are too few parties that offer Internet service, and if the proposal to allow tiered service is allowed it will allow these parties to exact an undue influence on all other Internet based commerce. These tiered services only serve to benefit the parties that are already large, and will build higher barriers for new businesses and technologies.

The only way that tiered services should be allowed is if these companies divest themselves of their media affiliates. They should also be compelled to offer wholesale access to their networks so that there is some competition in regional areas.

These parties are acting in collusion to suppress competition. They should be broken up, not given authority to extend their influence to other industries.

I hope that you will do the right thing.

Sincerely,
Rano Banerjee
