Please classify broadband internet as a common carrier service. Net neutrality needs to remain because the internet isn't a business model. The internet is a collective of ideas and innovations that can't have any biases added to it via Internet Service Providers. And it's bullsh*t to say that we as customers can switch providers if we don't like our service, which was an alleged defense to ending net neutrality. I and many other people in rural areas only have one viable internet provider (in my case it's Time Warner). We cannot switch to anyone else, there is no other service available, and we are not financially capable of upgrading our services.
