

7521103942.txt

I would like to write to you in support of the principal of net neutrality. It is important that every content provider be given equal access to the internet in order to ensure that the creativity and free nature of the medium is preserved.

I cannot see one coherent argument put up by those in favor of net neutrality for charging different content providers at different rates.