

7521104258.txt

The Time Warner Cable Comcast merger is bad for the consumer and bad for the internet. Comcast is consistently rated one of the worst companies in the US, but they still rake in ludicrous profits every year. How can such a terrible company do so well? They have no competition in their markets. You can chose Comcast or terrible internet. This is not a real choice and offers no true competition. By allowing Comcast to expand their stranglehold on internet service, the FCC would be doing an extreme disservice to the american public, the internet, and by extension, the entire free world.