

7521104516.txt

I strongly urge the FCC to maintain enforcement of a true open internet. The loss of net neutrality leaves cable companies the ability to take advantage of customers more than they already do where comcast for instance has a monopoly (which is in a lot of the country). And it diminishes opportunities for small businesses that cannot afford these suggested "premium" services that these new rules will allow for. It gives no advantage to regular customers and only will diminish the speed of the internet.