PLEASE keep the internet as a free service. Knowing how banks, high-power companies, and other rich services cheat the general public way too often so they can make a profit, I can indefinitely say that handing the internet, a place where everyone is supposed to be equal, where things aren't about cheapsaking and profit, but about competition, where people from all walks of life and many different economic classes go to entertain themselves, to educate themselves, and to start their own jobs and businesses, to the high-class, power hungry, greedy businessmen of today will mean nothing but the abandonment of democracy as companies charge higher and higher prices for websites, and more and more people will become unable to afford the use of the internet. Making the decision to forget the free ways of the internet today will cease the widespread of trade, culture, ideas, and business. It will downgrade our societies, not improve them.
