To the members of the FCC:

To preserve the free flow of ideas, there must never be "slow lanes" and "fast lanes" on the Internet. Do not sell out the American public to the telecom giants that lobby you. The US has among the slowest and costliest Internet service in the world because private telecoms want it that way, for profit. You are a public entity whose purpose is to serve the American people. Letting them be held over a barrel by the telecomms is the opposite of that. The US should have municipal, nonprofit broadband everywhere. No amount of money should ever be valued more than the free flow of information. Please think of the people rather than profits and lobbyists. Thank you.
