

7521105357.txt

This merger is asinine. The ability for two of the largest "cable" companies to become one conglomerate provides the average consumer even less options when it comes to services.

Currently the cable companies have been doing nothing to improve their service, yet they take in funds and raise prices with no improvement. If I can move overseas and pay for faster internet cheaper than it is to get slower internet in my own house, something is messed up in this world.