

7521105373.txt

The internet is a massive multi-national network that isp's should not be allowed to regulate, because they would in effect control communications between people in america and outside of america. This is why the internet should be a telecommunications service. It is starting with throttling speeds of the internet, but eventually companies will get bold enough to outright ban websites that could negatively effect them. This would reduce our freedom, and essentially we would have as much free internet as North Korea.