Please reclassify the internet as a "common carrier" telecommunications service. Internet neutrality is essential for innovation. We are already behind the rest of the developed world in connection speeds, and pay a higher price for our slower speeds. If telecommunications companies are allowed to control the flow of information, they will configure things for maximum profit at the expense of fairness and progress. The level playing field is one of the most cherished values in the United States. Please don't allow it to be taken away.
