The free and open internet has empowered me to learn, grow, and contribute to the economy by serving as a web marketer, video producer, and more. Without net neutrality, serious barriers of entry prevent people like me and citizens with fewer resources from being able to learn and contribute to the world in such positive ways. Charging more to some web companies or service providers or even to their customers is the opposite of conditions that have historically made the internet a place for collaboration and creation. Keep the internet free, open, and with equal access to keep the American Dream alive - our best hope is the web.
