

7521105621.txt

I am gravely concerned about the proposal to allow two tiered service of the internet by ISPs. The internet is the key to economic development and the current regulations (let alone the proposed system) stifle the free market and discourage competition. The United States is already being left behind by other countries that have nurtured competition between ISPs. Britain for example has far better consumer choice and a thriving market.

The FCC needs to rectify its past mistakes and reclassify internet service as a telecommunications service. Competition must be restored.